THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.

The Quarterly Review-March 28.

By DAVIS W. CLARK. -Lesson I: Acts i, 1-M.-The book of acts is no specimen of ambitious rhetoric. It is simplicity and brevity itself. What makes it so fascinating is its series of pictures, not their framework. The planting of Christianity was amid events brilliant, significant, beneficent. Acts faithfully depicts these scenes. That is its charm. No frontispiece could be more appropriate. Christ's ascension is the true starting point of ecclesiastical his-

-Lesson II: Acts ii, 1-13.-Pentecost is the irrefragable seal to the ascension of Jesus. When the high priest went within the veil, though the people saw him not, they golden bells that fringed his robe. They were assured that he still lived, and performed the holiest rites of their religion. So this preterratural sound, this dazzling sight of Pentecost, all subsequent believers are assured, that the Eternal Priest of the universal heart, having entered within the veil, yet lives and pleads.

-Lesson III: Acts ii, 32-47.-Of the 531 words in this sermon 218 are used in quotations from the Hebrew Scriptures, so This masterpiece of sacred oratory, this first gospel sermon, produced a surprising transformation in the auditors. They began by calling the apostles drunkards; they ended by calling them brothers. The lovely and fascinating picture of the apostolic church, which the closing para-graph of this chapter contains, could never have been painted but for the thorough work done in the hearts of these hearers. They were awakened, convicted, penitent, believing, converted, baptized. A splendid foundation.

-Lesson IV: Acts iii, 1-16.emancipated from his malady. So, in a sense in which he never could have done so before, the convert enters the church and has communion with God and his fellow-believers. The spiritual nature, impotent before, now receives strength. And this miracle of grace is the one sufficient, irrefutable evidence of the divinity of -Lesson V: Acts iv, 1-14 .-This circumstance is a history of Christfanity in epitonie. As a system it crept not into the world clandestinely. It was challenged, criticised, persecuted. It has proven itself a system of good deeds. It is a stream of philanthropies, It is the divine and sovereign means of uplifting a humanity crippled with sin. This river of God, which is rapidly converting a sin-scorched Sahara into a paradise, nonplusses inadelity as "the man healed" did the Sanbedrin. They can "say nothing against it." Nothing that is rational or conclusive.

-Lesson VI: Acts iv, 32; v, 11.-The punishment was Sinaitic in celerity and fearfulness. This hypocrite, who braved it to lie divine wrath. This awful penalty was epochal and exemplary. A frightful picture was hung on the wall of the apostolic church that day, designed to be a powerful deterrent from.

-Lesson VII: Acts v, 17-32.-The angelic jail delivery is first in a series of and put themselves more in evidence by publicly addressing the people. Their obedience and courage are admirable.

-Lesson VIII: Acts vi. 8-15; vii. 54-60.-The inhuman and irrational character of redom of Stephen. He "confounded his enemies with Scripture and reason, but they beat his brains out with stones." Luke draws the contrast graphically. They gnash their teeth, stop their ears and set upon the martyr like wolves. He, oblivious to all, gazes upward at a beatific vision. Then, like his Master, commending his spirit to God and praying for his murderers, he ralls on sleep.

-- Lesson IX: Acts viii, 1-17,-The preaching of the gospel to the Samaritans was an eye-opener to the Jewish Christians. If the gospel could be received by the Samaritans, to the Jews the Samaritans were at the very lowest social notch. If the gospel was for all, thus Samaria was the first pier in the bridge over which Christianity passed to the whole

-Lesson X: Acts viii, 26-40 .-Ethiopia is the second pier in the bridge over which the gospel passed to the whole world. Philip finds he is called away from a city to onvert an empire without ever setting foot in The eunuch's chariot becomes a car of salvation, rolling a thousand miles into the heart of Nuoia.

-Lesson XI: Acts ix. 1-12; 17-20.-The conversion of St. Paul must ever be retianity. The logical and judicial mind of the Pauline epistles could not have been imposed upon by a cunningly devised fable. The man who catalogues such sufferings could have no sinister motive in propagating a lie. The con-clusion is inevitable: the religion which Paul espoused is divine.

-Lesson XII: I Cor. ix. 19-27 .-Paul's favorite description of the religious life is in the figure of the Greek sports. So minute and accurate is he that it is affirmed a whole series of athletic events could be constructed from his allusions. In his personal experience he rays; "I run in the stadion, not in a wavering line, but straight to the goal. I box, not as one striking out in air; I rain blows on my ody, lest, having heralded others, I should be cast out myself." bSlkO;-UOI---- etao hrdlu hrdl athar artharth

Decision of the Supreme Court Discussed at Conference of Lawyers-Views of Judge J. A. Logan.

At Chicago yesterday afternoon, in the office of George R. Peck, general counsel of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, a meeting of the leading roads in the Western Freight Association was held for the FOR SALE-Bargains in shop-worn, new and purpose of discussing the recent decision of the Supreme Court and its probable effect on the associations under which the Western roads have been working. B. F. Ayer, the general counsel of the Illinois Central, was chosen chairman of the meeting. The conference lasted the entire afternoon and terminated in nothing as far as action was concerned. No formal decision was reached by the meeting and no announcement was made. The meeting was more for the exchange of views than for any other purpose. It was agreed, however, with few dissenting voices, that the decision would have the effect of doing away with the Western Freight Association the agreement of this association is such as to bring it directly in conflict with the Supreme Court decision, and the combined pinion of the attorneys present was that it cannot continue. The Western Passenger Association agreement was not taken up, but the decision made regarding the freight association is sufficiently sweeping to include the passenger association. Both are organized on practically the same lines, and if one of them is in the line of the decision the other must necessarily be so. It is likely that formal action will be taken MUSICAL-Vocal instruction. Voices tested free. Association out of existence in an official Association out of existence in an official sense. In a practical sense it is dead already. There is no question but what both the passenger and freight associations will be in operation within a short time, but in a form different from that in which they ive been working up to the present time. Opinions were divided at the meeting yesterday as to whether it was most desirable to endeavor to bring about such legislation | still so crippled by rheumatism as to conas will allow the roads to form associations similar to the Western passenger and freight associations or to continue the association work in such a manner as to avoid all conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court. The general majority of those present favored the former plan, but it did not get beyond a mere discussion. Two more roads withdrew from the Western Freight Association yesterday, the Rock Island and the Sioux City & Northern being the members to pull out. The rooms of the association were practically closed all day and no effort was made to do any-

> Judge James A. Logan, general solicitor of the Pennsylvania road, said yesterday that the Joint Traffic Association was not necessarily determined to be illegal by the recent decision of the Supreme Court. "Senator George F. Edmunds," said Judge Logan, "who has been the counsel for the Interstate-commerce Commission in most of its important cases and is therefore especially well posted, has examined the contract of the Joint Traffic Association and pronounced it lawful, although he does regard the trust act as applying to railroads. don't by any means think that the decision of the Supreme Court in the transmissouri case necessarily governs the Joint Traffic Association, and I have read Judge Peckham's opinion in full. Only three things were decided in that opinion of material moment. First, that the ending by agreement of the parties of the contract against which the suit was brought did not end the right of the court to inquire into its validity. It is manifest that this has nothing to do with the joint traffic agreement. Second, that the Sherman trust act applies to railroads. This is an interesting deliverance, but as to the joint traffic case is academic. The joint traffic agreement was entered into by some of the leading lines with the belief that the trust act did apply to railroads and that within that act the agreement was lawful. The third point decided was that the transmissouri agreement did violate the trust act apparently because the association, rather than each company composing it. was given the power to adopt rates. The joint traffic agreement gives no power to association to adopt rates except subordinate to the continuing power of the boards of the several companies. The doubtful applicability of the decision must

"You do not think, then, that the decision, will have the same effect on the Joint Traffic Association as on the Western Freight and Passenger associations?" "On that subject, of course, I cannot speak. It seems to me, though, that the Western roads were a little hasty in with-

The Chicago & Great Western celebrated its severance from the the 33 1-3 per cent, reduction recently made on shipments from Atlantic scaboard points to St. Paul to all business originating east of the Indiana and Illinois State lines, This practically establishes a 40 cent basis, first class, from Chicago to St. Paul.

The first of the expected breaks in through freight rates as a result of the peculiar position in which all railroads find themselves without the binding influences of associations has developed at Milwaukee. was currently reported yesterday that one of the all-rail lines had given certain Milwaukee shippers an 18-cent rate, all rail. to New York on malt, which would be a cut of 2 cents per one hundred pounds and the same rate as the differential across the lake. For some time the through rate on malt, grain, etc., has been 20 cents all rail and 18 cents via lake and rail.

Yesterday's meeting of the Joint Traffic Association board of managers was brief and devoted to routine business. The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the transmissouri case was not discussed it was said, and no action in the matter will be taken until the various roads in the association have conferred with their coun-President Depew, of the New York Central, has announced himself in favor of a policy of inaction until the excitement created by the decision has died out. Electricity for Steam.

The Illinois Central has decided to use electricity in place of steam in its suburban service. The cost of the improvement, it is thought, will be between $500,000 and $1,000,-600. The Baltimore & Ohio has the credit of being the first road to utilize electricity in the handling of trains. The Pennsylvania then took the matter up and is operating several short lines by electricity. The New York, New Haven & Hartford is arranging to use it on a more extensive scale than has been undertaken by any railroad company as yet. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton company has all the plans and specifications perfected for introducing it on part of that system and for suburban service, and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy is working in the same direction. Among mechanical engineers a belief prevails that for suburban service electricity will be substituted for steam. One of the essential things in suburban service is to start and stop trains quickly and this can be done to perfection where the electric

Railroad will be compelled to more than double its hauling capacity. It is understood, therefore, that Mr. Morgan's mission abroad is to lay his plans before his foreign friends, and enlist their support financially. It will take a vast deal of wealth to accomplish what is intended. Among other things, there will be built much more powerful engines than those now in use on the road, and a new forty-ton car is to be introduced. Mr. Ingalls's familiarity with the workings of the C. & O., it is said, is what brought him

Needlessly Alarmed. The general solicitor of one of the Indianapolis system of railways suggests that the roads have survived the predictions of the opponents of the interstate-commerce aw. The law has by no means proved as destructive to railroad interests as had been predicted. Their financial distress has not been greater than that of other business interests. It should be borne in mind | + that pools and traffic agreements have worked with the best success only when the volume of traffic was large. "No scheme has yet been devised," said the attorney, to prevent irregularities when there was a scramble for the light traffic and I believe this agitation will lead to the suggestion of plans, some one of which will be selected, permitting railroads to adopt an organization which will furnish stability to rates under the protection of law through legalized pools or traffic agreements."
